GLOVER IS HANGED.

He Is First White Man Executed in Richmond County in 70 Years.

Augusta, Ga., Feb. 1.—The first white man to hang in Richmond county in seventy years was legally executed in the county jail yard here Friday morning.

The drop fell at 10:18 o'clock, eastern time. Arthur P. Glover was the victom, and he paid the extreme penalty for murdering Maud Dean Williamson in the King mill here on Oct. 19, 1906.

Practically every resort known in the modern science of law had been tried to save the condemned man, but at last the majesty of the law could not be evaded and Glover went to his doom on the gallows.

Only a small and select crowd witnessed the execution, the doctors, the executioner, a few friends and a couple of newspaper men formed the coterie that watched the prisoner walk calmly on the trap that swung him into eternity. He was looking far better than when he was imprisoned almost two years ago, and his tread was as fearless as could be.

The story of his crime and the steps taken to escape the penalty is a public story. On the day of the crime he walked into King mill and approaching a helpless woman operative, pulled a large pistol from his pocket and deliberately shot her five times, two or three of the shots being fired after she had fallen. He was a skilled marksman and either of the four shots would have proven fatal. The poor woman died almost without a tremor in a pool of her own life blood.

GEN. WOOD'S RECOMMENDATION

Provides Other Sources of Supply for Officers of Philippine Scouts.

Washington, Feb. 1.—General Wood has recommended legislation providing other sources of supply for officers of the Phillipine scouts than those now available. He suggests that appointments to junior places in the commissioned personnel of that organization be extended to graduates of certian military schools and to military academy cadets of two years' service found deficient in only one study and who are recommended for appointment by the academy board.

General Wood points out that the classes of eligibles in whose behalf a preference is established by law, will soon reach such an age as to preclude their appiontment to the grade of second lieutenant in the scout organization.

The audience was notified at the beginning of the performance and when the actress appeared seated in a wheeled chair she was given hearty applause. Notwithstanding the great difficulty the portrayal was a remarkably clever and spirited one.

HARRY K. THAW DECLARED INSANE

When He Killed Stanford White on Roof Garden.

COMMITTED TO INSANE ASYLUM

Littleton, Thaw's Lawyer, and Solicitor Jerome "Break Even" As Result of Verdict—Thaw Could Have Gone to Asylum at Former Trial.

Special to The Sun.

New York, Feb. 1.—After arguing and balloting all night long in the little room adjoining the chamber of the criminal branch of the supreme court, the jury in the Harry Thaw case filed into court this morning and returned a verdict that Thaw was insane when he killed Stanford White on the Madison Square Roof Garden, and the court thereupon committed the defendant to the Mattewan Insane Asylum. The verdict was a great surprise to Thaw, as he expected to go "Scott free," and he has repeatedly asserted that he would ratner be hung than committed to the asylum.

The verdict is considered a great victory for Thaw's lawyer, Martin Littleton, however, as he has saved the neck of his client.

New York, Feb. 1.—By noon Friday the fate of Harry K. Thaw was in the hands of the jury.

The lawyers finished their summing up and Judge Dowling finished his charge at 11 o'clock.

The jury retired at 11:40 a. m., taking all the exhibits with them.

HARRY K. THAW.

In opening his charge to the jury Justice Dowling impressed upon the jurors the responsibility which was theirs, telling them that they should bear in bind that upon their verdict depended the life or liberty of the prisoner.

"Your verdict must not be influenced by any matter outside the record," said he. "Neither passion nor sympathy should sway you in your deliberations. You must not speculate or guess as to matters in evidence here, but must decide the issue solely upon your calm, dispassionate judgment as to the weight, credibility and meaning of the testimony. Nor are you concerned with the punishment which may follow a verdict of guilty at your hands. Your sole function is to determine if any crime had been committed, its grade, and leave the question of penalty to those responsible for its imposition."

Justice Dowling told the jurors they should bear in mind that the prisoner is presumed to be innocent until the jury has been convinced bevond a reasonable doubt that he is guilty and that the burden of proof as to every material element rests upon the prosecution throughout. It was within the power of the jury to accept or reject the testimony of any witness, in whole or in part, and also to determine the weight or importance to be given to the testimony of any witness.

After explaining at length the consideratins that the jury might take into account in weighing the testimony of witnesses, Justice Dowling referred to the so-called Hummel affidavit. He had told them that if a witness had been convicted of crime they might consider that fact in weighing his testimony, and also that if they found that any witness had deliberately testified falsely they were at liberty to disregard his testimony entirely.

Custer, the Indian fighter, killed in the Little Big Horn massacre, will erect to her husband's memory at Bronxville, a suburb of this city, will take the shape of a home for "ambitious girls," according to the announcement made by Mrs. Custer.

Mrs. Custer said that as long as she lived, she would act as a chaperone for the place where she desires to establish a home for girls ambitious enough to desire to help themselves, but who have not sufficient means to do so. Nominal fees will be charged for entrance to the home, so that those who take advantage of the privilege may not feel dependent. Work on the building will be started as soon as the weather will permit.

The goverament has no control of the situation.

The European residents have barricaded themselves in their houses and have applied to the Russian consul for Cossacks.

The viceroy of the Caucasus has ordered Russian troops to Julfa to be in readiness for any emergency.

URGENT DEFICIENCY BILL.

Measure Is Passed by the House Carrying Over $23,000,000.

Washington, Feb. 1.—The urgent deficiency appropriation bill was passed by the house Thursday. The total amount carried by it is $23,664,450, or $410,000 less than as reported by the committee. The largest single reduction was that of $300,000 in the clothing fund of the army.

When the session was resumed on Thursday only a few pages of the bill remained to be disposed of. Included in these was a provision for the appointment of thirty-four additional policemen for the new house office building. Chairman Tawney urged the provision because of the necessity for protecting such costly government property and "of guarding the reputation and honor of the members."

Mr. Mann of Illinois, opposed the provision, and it was stricken out on a point of order after considerable discussion.

The loss by the fire is estimated at $15,000, with insurance of $6,000.

CUMMER CAMPS AGAIN AT WORK.

Were Closed Down Pending Orders From Large Northern Dealers.

HUNDREDS OF MEN EFFECTED

The Camps, as Well as the Big Mill at Jacksonville, Were Closed for Few Days, But Orders from East Set the Wheels to Going Again.

After having been closed down for the past few days, owing to the absence of orders, the lumber camps of the Cummer Lumber Company throughout the county, which employ several hundred men, as well as the big mill at Jacksonville, which has also been closed, have resumed operations.

This will be gratifying information to the numerous commercial interests of the county, as the Cummer camps meant a great deal to the merchants.

The cause for re-opening the camps and resuming operations is said to be due to several large orders which the firm received from parties in the East. The money stringency for a time played a great part in the destinies of this company, and eventually the orders ceased to come. The Cummer Company, preferring to be on the safe side, immediately closed their mill and the lumber camps until they could see their way clear.

Fortunately this period was not long, with the result that all the men both in the timber camps and the mill are at work again.

NEWS OF CITY AND COUNTY CONDENSED

J. F. Horner of Jacksonville, one of the prominent business men of that city, was in the city yesterday.

If you are in need of a suit, come to our store Monday and save money. Last call. The Phifer & Morris Co.

Friends of little Miss Jeanette, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Geo. P. Morris, will regret to learn that she is quite ill, but will hope for her speedy recovery.

W. D. Sheppard, a clever traveling man who makes his home in this city, returned yesterday from an extended visit to points in East Florida, and will remain here for the next two or three days.

Foley's Honey and Tar cures the most obstinate coughs and expels the cold from the system as it is mildly laxative. It is guaranteed. The genuine is in the yellow package.—J. W. McCollum & Co.

Sheriff L. W. Fennell has returned from the Ocklawaha swamps, where he has been on a hunt for the past few days with his brother, John Fennell, of Campville. The hunt was very successful, three fine deer being the victim.

E. K. Rosborough of Windsor, the clever and successful traveling representative of J. H. McLaurin, Jacksonville, was in the city yesterday. He left in the afternoon for his home, where he will spend Sunday with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Rosborough.

Miss Margaret B. Taylor, who is just recovering from a severe attack of typhoid fever, is spending a few days at Tioga as a guest of her sister, Mrs. C. V. McKinstry. Friends are glad to learn that she is rapidly gaining strength, and that she will soon be all right again.

W. Sobol, who for the past year has been connected with B. Edelstein in the capacity of manager, has opened up a business of his own at 102 West Main street N., in rear of the Gainesville National Bank. Mr. Sobol is quite popular here, and will no doubt enjoy a fine business. He will deal in clothing and ladies' and gents' furnishings.

Max Krauss of Savannah, for more than a quarter of a century a familiar figure in this section as a traveling salesman, was in the city yesterday. Mr. Krauss is probably the oldest man, in point of service, traveling this territory. He notes the progress of the country everywhere, and declares Gainesville is above the standard in the march of improvements.

As will be seen by notice elsewhere in this issue, Marshal Ben T. Arnow is a candidate for re-election. Mr. Arnow has made an excellent official since his election last April, and his friends will give him loyal support in his candidacy for re-election. Where a public official performs his duty faithfully he is naturally a hard man to beat for a second term.

A New England play entitled, "Along the Kennebec," will be presented at the opera house Wednesday evening, February 5th. This company carries all its own scenery for the production, and its stage settings are said to be extraordinarily pretty and well appointed. The play itself is a comedy pure and simple, with an absence of cheap sensationalism but an abundance of good clean comedy, something that we can laugh at and not understand afterwards what we laughed at. The funny duel scene in the third act is said to be a pretty good cure for the blues for the evening at least, and the splendid orchestra will please all lovers of good music.

Neglected Colds Threaten Life.

[From The Chicago Tribune.]

"'Don't trifle with a cold,' is good advice for prudent men and women. It may be vital in the case of a child. Proper food, good ventilation, and dry, warm clothing are the proper safeguards against colds. If they are maintained through the changeable weather of autumn, winter and spring, the chances of a surprise from ordinary colds will be slight. But the ordinary light cold will become severe if neglected, and a well established ripe cold is to the germs of diphtheria what honey is to the bee. The greatest menace to child life at this season of the year is the neglected cold." Whether it is a child or adult, the cold slight or severe, the very best treatment that can be adopted is to give Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. It is safe and sure. The great popularity and immense sale of this preparation has been attained by its remarkable cures of this ailment. A cold never results in pneumonia when it is given. For sale by all druggists.

OBSTINATE ULCERS MAY LEAD TO CANCER

There is no difference, at first, in the appearance of a cancerous sore and a common ulcer, and for this reason every sore that is obstinate or slow in healing should excite suspicion, for the sore is nothing more than the external evidence of a polluted blood, and if allowed to remain may degenerate into Cancer. Efforts to heal the ulcer by means of salves, plasters and other external remedies always result in failure, because such treatment can have no possible effect on the blood, where the deadly germs and morbid matter form, and are carried through the circulation to the place. No sore or ulcer can exist without a predisposing internal cause, and the open, discharging ulcer or festering old sore will continue to eat deeper into the surrounding flesh as long as a polluted, germ-infected circulation discharges its impurities into it. S. S. S. goes to the fountain-head of the trouble, and drives out the germ-producing poisons and morbid impurities which keep the ulcer open. Then as this rich, purified blood goes to the diseased place the healing begins, all discharge ceases, the inflammation gradually leaves, new tissue and healthy flesh are formed, and soon the sore is permanently cured. S. S. S. is made entirely of roots and herbs of a healing, cleansing nature, and unlike mineral medicines which often do great damage to the delicate parts of the system, S. S. S. tones up every part of the body. Book on Sores and Ulcers and any medical advice desired free.

THE INSTALMENT PLAN

Some have criticised the instalment business as a menace to our people. Such indeed it may become when families are loaded up with diamonds, books and other articles of more or less a luxurious nature, when the weekly or monthly payments become a burden and finally the family sense of honor is crushed beneath the load. But the good the instalment business does far outweighs the bad. It is a pleasant contemplation for us to think of the thousands of homes we have had a hand in the establishing. It is pleasant to think that in these cases we have worked hand in hand with Cupid, and that but for the instalment business as we have conducted it, many a man would have continued to live in a hall-bedroom, and many a pretty maid to have wasted the beauty of her youth in waiting—waiting for the man of her choice to make his fortune.

THE GAINESVILLE BAND.

Reorganization Has Been Perfected, and Band is Now Practicing.

Those who are interested in music will be glad at the information that the Gainesville brass band has been reorganized, and that in a short time the people of Gainesville will again have the pleasure of listening to good music from an organization composed of the citizens of the city.

An interesting and well-attended practice meeting was held Friday evening, at which a great deal of enthusiasm was manifested. There were several musicians of the city present with their own instruments, and a most satisfactory practice was held.

The new organization will be under the direction of James A. Abrams, a musician of ability who understands band music, and it goes without saying that the Gainesville band will yet come out "to the good."

Death of Mrs. Deveneau.

Mrs. Caroline M. Deveneau, eighty-eight years of age, a resident of this city, died at the home of her son, Rev. J. M. Deveneau, at Hampton on Friday, of advanced age.

Deceased has resided for some time with her daughter, Mrs. L. W. Jackson. About three months ago she went on a visit to her son at Hampton, where she was taken sick, and never recovered.

She was born in Cartersville, Ga., but came to Florida twenty-five years ago, settling in Ocala. Two years later she came to Gainesville, where she has resided ever since. She was a devout member of the Baptist church and a devout worker as long as her age and health would permit.

Deceased is survived by one son, Rev. J. M. Deveneau, Hampton, and one daughter, Mrs. L. W. Jackson of this city, to whom the sympathy of the community is extended.

The funeral will be held at Hampton today.

Dandy Dixie Minstrels.

The Dandy Dixie Minstrels, a wholly colored aggregation of the minstrel art, appeared at the opera house last night to a good audience, and those who attended appeared well pleased with the entertainment, which was clean, clear cut and very creditable in every way.

The Dandy Dixies are no strangers in this section of the country, being an old and reliable organization. Those in attendance last night showed their appreciation of the work of this aggregation by constant applause.

WILL GO TO WASHINGTON.

President Warner and Others Will Appear Before Commission.

F. D. Warner, president of the Florida State Vegetable and Fruit Growers' Protective Association, expects to leave tomorrow for Washington, where, with a half-dozen other prominent men of the State, he will appear before the Interstate Commerce Commission in behalf of the association in the matter of securing equitable rates.

It will be remembered that this fight has been on for some time, the State Association having argued that the rates on fruits and vegetables from points in Florida were very much in excess of the rates charged on the same class of produce from other points. This hearing will be the outcome of the complaints, and President Warner feels sure that the Interstate Commission will take some favorable action in the premises.

Reduction in Passenger Rates.

Through the efforts of W. L. Hill the passenger rate on the S. A. L. railroad from Gainesville to Jacksonville has been reduced to $2.10. The rate heretofore charged was $2.15, and Mr. Hill took the matter up with the Railroad Commission, who in turn called the attention of the railroad authorities to the excess charges, and the reduction was at once ordered. It is really less than 70 miles to Jacksonville, but the fraction being over 69½ the railroad is permitted to charge for 70 miles.

South Carolina sticks to county local option on the liquor question, the bill providing for State prohibition having been defeated in both branches of the Legislature.

The commercial travelers are now going to give attention to securing steel passenger coaches. They hold that the metal casket has demonstrated advantages over the wooden coffin.

"Autos" may damage roads as the State engineers claim; but there can be no doubt about the assertion that motor cars have done more for improving highways than anything in a century.

Mrs. Mary Baker G. Eddy travels with all the precaution that attends the Czar of Russia. Why all this caution? Surely no one wants to dynamite the venerable discoverer of Christian Science.

The fact that the election of either of the Senatorial aspirants from Jacksonville will practically mean the defeat of Senator Taliaferro in 1910, will keep many personal friends of candidates Bryan and Fletcher from voting for either of them.

"Judge Briles" of the Atlanta municipal court has increased the price of plain drunks in that city from $3.75 under the saloon system to $25.75 under prohibition. He argues that the temptation of the saloon being removed a person who now gets drunk in the Gate City does so deliberately.

The State Democratic Executive Committee has been called to meet at the Aragon Hotel in Jacksonville on Tuesday, February 11, at 10 o'clock a. m., for the purpose of setting a date for holding the State primary for the nomination of Democratic candidates. The committee will also be called upon to elect a new chairman, as the present chairman, Hon. D. U. Fletcher, is a candidate for United States Senator.

The Mikado seems to have set out to give American statesmen and diplomats a few lessons in the art of jollying. Lesson number one is an order issued by the Japanese Government, which, among other things, absolutely prohibits emigration to the Hawaiian Islands, excepting relatives of Japanese already there. The class in Washington is trying to figure out how many millions of relatives the six hundred or so "Japs" in Hawaii probably have.

The Miami Metropolis says: "Will history repeat itself this year? If it does, it means that the next National election will be a Democratic victory. Look back at the record of past panics, and you will note that the party in power at the time of a great financial crisis has always been punished in the next elections. The panic of 1837 beat Van Buren, and brought in 'Tippecanoe and Tyler, too' in 1840. The panic of 1857 killed the Buchanan administration, and paved the way for Lincoln. The panic of 1873 gave the Democrats the next three Congresses, and the popular majority for Tilden in 1876. The panic of 1893 crippled the Democracy, and put McKinley into the White House as 'The advance agent of prosperity.'"

MAKING PROGRESS SOME.

Frank Harris, editor of The Ocala Banner and the oldest editor in Florida, in point of service, has the following interesting article in his paper of January 30th, being a partial review of the progress of the country since his birth:

"Some people are disposed to rub the fur of a cat's back the wrong way, and people of this particular gender can discern nothing but foul odors and thistles where to everybody else the whole earth seems redolent with the beauty and fragrance of flowers.

"Perhaps trade is not as good today as it was yesterday, or perhaps it is not as good this month as it was last month, and they are at once seized with the idea that the State is growing backward instead of forward, and as gloom succeeds gloom, soon the whole universe becomes overcast with a leaden sky and nowhere does a ray of light or a silver lining appear.

"But let us go back to a single life and see how marvelous have been the changes and the improvements within that period.

"The editor of this paper was born after Florida was admitted into the Union, and the improvements that have followed so rapidly upon the heels of each other seem almost incredible.

"When he was born there had not yet been constructed a single mile of railroad in any part of Florida, unless it was the one now obsolete to the old town of St. Joseph.

"Now, glance your eye over the map and see how the State is cobwebbed with these great arteries of commerce!

"Indeed, when the editor of this paper was born the 'neigh of the iron horse' had only become familiar to a few of the principal cities in a few of the States of the Union.

"The 'tinder box' was just beginning to surrender its place to the friction match.

"The 'tallow dip' and the huge silver and pewter 'snuffers' were a part of the paraphernalia of every well regulated household.

"The 'flint lock' yet held its own and such a thing as a breach-loading, hammerless shotgun had not yet entered into one's most idealistic dreams.

"Ocala and Marion county were not yet given a place on the map—Marion, Sumter and Lake all formed a part of the territory of Alachua.

"The cities of the State were Tallahassee, Pensacola, St. Augustine, Tampa, Key West, New Port, St. Joseph, and one or two more places about the size of Santos.

"The telegraph, whose wires now girdle the earth and climb over mountains and under seas, and like so many sensitive nerves, instantly conveying anything happening at any one point to the remotest parts; indeed now the very currents of the air are harnessed to our service, and through the same we keep in touch with ships at sea.

"The great perfecting printing presses, typewriting and typesetting machines, and hundreds of other inventions that we now find useful in our every-day life, were all unknown at that period.

"The Concord stage coach, with its relay of horses every twelve miles, we thought a rapid and most luxurious mode of travel, and the weather was just as cold then as now, and the roads were far more execrable.

"We made fires in the early mornings by burying live coals in the ashes the night before, and the fault-finders were much more rare in those days than now.

"Making progress! Well, we guess so.

"Open your eyes and behold the things that are to be seen.

"Florida dotted over with beautiful, thriving towns and cities, and where a little while ago were wood, morass and swamp are now peaceful homes and fruitful orchards.

"See the magnificent Pullman vestibuled trains speeding as fast as steam can carry them, headed direct from New York through Florida almost to Key West, making the trip quicker and in far greater comfort than the trip was formerly made from Ocala to Jacksonville.

"We behold Mergenthaler typesetting machines, cylinder presses, electric motors in nearly every Florida printing office, and electric lights, telephones, hot and cold water baths, and luxuries formerly denied to a king, in nearly every home, and on the farm and in the marts of trade hundreds of industrial activities busily at work, tell a story of the march of progress so marvelous as to read almost like a fable.

"See the sky-scrapers that so quickly followed on the heels of the invention of the steam and electric elevator.

"What would our ancestors have thought of the erection of a building forty-five stories high?

"Why, we have buildings now higher than the tower of Babel, which our ancestors thought was so fearfully high that its progress had to be stopped by the confusion of tongues.

"Marvelous as these things are, what more marvelous things will the babe of today behold if he is fortunate enough to round out the biblical limit of life!

"Man, in the wonderful use of his brain and brawn, is just beginning to realize that he was born in the image of his Maker!"

COL. BROWN'S SPEECH.

The speech of Col. T. J. L. Brown at Tampa, promulgating his platform of principles as a candidate for the United States Senate, appears to have struck a popular chord in the Cigar City. The Tampa Evening News refers to the speech editorially as follows:

"The Evening News wishes to congratulate Col. T. J. L. Brown on the speech he made at the court house last night. It was a very comprehensive and well-balanced utterance, covering the ground admirably, and full of notable declarations.

"Especially was Col. Brown timely and forcible in his utterances on the need of conversatism in Florida, in the necessity for inviting capital rather than repelling it. His doctrine of 'more bread and butter and less agitation' is likely to awake a responsive chord all over Florida. Essentially a man of action, Col. Brown's expressions along this line came with the force of sincerity and they were highly appreciated by his audience.

"On the great questions of deep water, immigration, financial relief and State's rights, the speech left nothing to be desired. His observations on his opponents were dignified but effective; and he concluded with a brilliant tribute to the Democratic cause and to the party's prospects in the approaching election which brought forth liberal applause.

"Col. Brown is apt to make a decidedly favorable impression throughout the State, when he goes forth on his campaign, which will begin immediately after the close of the State Fair. He is certainly entitled to the best consideration and support of Tampaites, for he has been a devoted and poorly-paid fighter for this city."

Nancy Henderson, a negro woman residing on the naval reservation, was carried to Pensacola by United States Deputy Marshals Ray and Johnson, assisted by three or four marines from the navy yard, and placed in the county jail. The woman is violently insane, and recently made an attempt to burn the house in which she was residing, as well as attacking her sister. The officers had much trouble in getting the woman to the city, notwithstanding the fact that both lower limbs are missing, having been cut off by a train a number of years ago.

Tuesday afternoon, at train time, two men came very near losing their lives at the depot through carelessness. No. 55, southbound, stood on the sidetrack, awaiting the arrival of northbound No. 66. The latter train was somewhat belated, and several men stood on the main track waiting for it, the steam from the safety valve of 55 meanwhile issuing with a deafening roar. At last the northbound arrived and all left the track except two men. One, a stranger, whose name could not be learned, stood with his back toward the approaching train and did not hear it on account of the noise made by the other engine. He would have been run over if another man, in the nick of time, had not caught hold of him and jerked him from the track. About 50 feet farther stood a Mr. Laney of Bronson on the main track, waiting for his train to start. He also had his back toward the incoming train and would soon have been in the hands of the undertaker had it not been for the lightning-like speed with which Engineer, Mr. Davis, applied the emergency brakes and sounded the whistle. As it was, the pilot of the engine was barely two feet from Mr. Laney when he found his danger and made a leap for safety.—Starke Telegraph.

THE ALDRICH BILL.

Measure Provides for More Money in Times of Stress.

Washington, Feb. 1.—Senator Aldrich, chairman of the senate committee on finance, has favorably reported his bill providing for an emergency increase in the national bank circulation. The report was authorized at a meeting of the committee held at which all the republican members present voted for a resolution authorizing the reporting of the bill and all the democrats voted for the Bailey substitute. Senator Hansbrough, who favors a central bank scheme, was not present, and his vote was unrecorded. The only democrats in attendance were Senators Teller, Bailey and Daniel. Senator Taliaferro, who is absent in Florida, was recorded as for the Bailey substitute. Senator Money also was absent and his vote was unrecorded. Mr. Aldrich said he would call the bill up for consideration on Monday, Feb. 10.

Various amendments which have been published from time to time appear in the bill, although in general character the bill remains the same as when introduced. There has been an effort on the part of the committee to emphasize the emergency nature of the act that is proposed, and to this end various amendments are inserted in the bill which are intended to cause speedy issuance of additional currency when a stringency occurs.

500 DELEGATES ATTEND.

Inter-Denominational Missionary Conference at 'Frisco.

San Francisco, Feb. 1.—More than 500 delegates and many more visitors attended the first international-denominational missionary conference ever held on this coast at the Calvary Presbyterian church Thursday.

Bishop John M. Walden, of New York, secretary of the board of bishops of the Methodist church, was the principal speaker. That the conditions of the city life are better for the making of citizens than those of rural life, was the startling statement made by the eastern bishop.

"I would trust the interests of this country to the people of the cities sooner than to any other section of our country's population," he said.

The bishop paid a high tribute to the Roman Catholic church. "Aside from any consideration of the religious value of the Roman Catholic church," he said, "its priests are a mighty power for the preservation of order and decency among the alien population of American cities."

Tight Lid in Birmingham.

Birmingham, Ala., Feb. 1.—That the reform laws of Alabama are to be extended still further in Birmingham was evidenced by the announcement from the sheriff's office that in future all cigar and sodawater stores will be closed on Sunday. This is provided in the new laws, but it is only now to be enforced. This action is in addition to stopping Sunday golf and forbidding all social card parties at clubs, hotels or other public places.

Life Savers Rescue Crew.

Nantucket, Mass., Feb. 1.—After a struggle of five hours against intense cold and a turbulent sea, the life savers of the Coskata station rescued the crew of the Newport brigantine Frederick Schepp, which was wrecked on Thursday on Coatue beach. Mrs. Charles Oversen, wife of the captain, and her baby, who were on board, were also taken off the stranded vessel.

BARS LIQUOR SHIPMENTS.

Decision Made by the Louisville and Nashville Road.

Louisville, Ky., Feb. 1.—Announcement is made by the Louisville and Nashville railroad that it will no longer receive shipments of liquor into Georgia or Alabama, states which have recently passed prohibition acts.

A high official of the road gave the reasons for the action by explaining that the right of the road to ship into prohibited territory, even though the traffic is interstate commerce, has been called in question by a suit filed in the federal court of Indiana, affecting the practice as carried on between Indiana points and points in Kentucky, which have voted against the sale of liquor.

Six liquidators were elected and immediately put in charge of the bank. They are John H. Fulton, Charles Janvier, Charles Godchaux, Warren Kearney, Louis Kohlman and Charles A. Morgan.

Shonts Will Make No Settlement on the Duc de Chaulnes.

New York, Feb. 1.—A pre-nuptial agreement has been signed by Miss Theodora Shonts, daughter of Theodore P. Shonts, and the Duc de Chaulnes, who are to be married Feb. 15. This agreement, it is announced, is purely formal and is necessary in the case of a marriage between a foreigner and an American. It is formally announced that no settlement has been made on the bridegroom. It is also announced that the wedding will be simple and in accord with American custom.

"The marriage of Miss Shonts and the duke will be according to this and no other country," said Mr. Shonts. "No question of a settlement on the duke has arisen as an issue and none will. I am saying this regretfully, because such subjects never arise when the bridegroom is an American."

THE MULE IN THE JUG.

An Arab Proverb and the Legend That Gave It Birth.

Who can affirm that the mule entered the jug?

This proverb is frequently quoted to show that, though one may conscientiously believe in a thing which may seem extravagant in itself, it is better not to repeat it from fear of being disbelieved. It arises from the following Arabic legend: An Arab who denied the existence of genii once bought a mule and took it home. When performing his evening ablutions, he saw the mule enter a jug, and this so scared him that he ran shouting to the neighbors and told them what he had seen. They, thinking him mad, endeavored to appease him, but all in vain. He vociferated more and more, so that the authorities sent him to the madhouse. When the doctor came to see him, he repeated the account of what he had seen, whereupon the doctor ordered him to be detained. He continued upon each visit of the doctor to repeat his statement until his friends succeeded in persuading him that if he wished to regain his freedom he must recant. This he did, and the doctor set him at liberty, to the great joy of his family and friends. On making his ablutions as before he again saw the mule, this time peeping out of the jug, but on this occasion he contented himself with remarking to the mule: "Oh, yes, I see you well enough, but who would believe me? And I have had enough of the madhouse." Needless to say that the genii to avenge themselves for his disbelief in them had transformed one of themselves into a mule and as such entered the jug.—Cairo (Egypt) Sphinx.

A ROCKING STONE.

New York's Souvenir of the Remote Glacial Period.

Though tens of thousands of persons yearly see the great rocking stone of Bronx park in New York city, few realize that it is the city's most conspicuous souvenir of the glacial period, when all of this section was covered with an ocean of ice some 1,500 feet thick that was moving slowly toward the south.

That pinkish bit of granite, weighing thirty tons, standing seven and one-half feet above its rocky base, being ten feet broad and eight feet thick, came from the far north, carried in the resistless icy arms of the glacier that swept over the continent down to this latitude, marking its path by depositing great bowlders as it moved and leaving scratches on the firm rocks beneath, from the sliding, grinding bits and masses of granite that settled to its base and were pushed along as it moved.

This same bowlder left its mark on the bare face of the rocky hill to the north of it, in which lies the crocodile pool. There the scratches are visible today, pointing to where the bowlder stands and telling the story of part of its travels.

When the melting ice departed from the great block of granite, it left it standing through the ages a rocking stone so delicately poised that a pressure of fifty pounds exerted on its most northern angle causes its apex to sway north and south about two inches.—New York Herald.

A FAMOUS DUEL.

The Fatal Meeting Between Commodores Barron and Decatur.

On March 22, 1820, was fought one of the most memorable duels in the annals of the United States. Commodore Decatur and Commodore Barron met on the fatal field near Bladensburg that day. Both participants were wounded, Decatur mortally, dying within a few hours after the encounter. The causes which led to the ill feeling between these two naval heroes have never been accurately determined, but it is generally supposed that Decatur's harsh criticism of Barron on account of the latter not returning from abroad to take part in the war brought about the breach. Certain it is that Decatur's words were repeated to Barron, and a correspondence between the two ensued, which probably resulted in the challenge. The impending duel was kept a profound secret. Only a few of the most intimate friends of the respective participants had even an inkling of it. Decatur was the first to arrive upon the scene. He was accompanied by Commodores Rodgers and Porter and several other friends. Barron arrived a few minutes later. The combatants bowed stiffly to each other and stood waiting for their friends to measure off the ground and make the final arrangements.

"I hope, sir," said Barron as they took their places, "that when we meet in another world we shall be better friends than we have been in this."

Decatur is said to have haughtily regarded his adversary a moment and then replied:

"Sir, I have never been your enemy."

A moment later the word was given, and two shots rang out simultaneously. Barron fell almost immediately. Decatur straightened himself, but the pistol fell from his grasp, and in a moment he was upon the greensward writhing in agony. He was raised by his friends and carried nearer the road, where Barron was lying.

"I wish I had fallen in the service of my country," Decatur muttered, whereupon Barron looked up.

"Everything has been conducted most honorably," he said.

Then, turning his eyes upon Decatur:

"I am mortally wounded. Commodore Decatur, I forgive you from the bottom of my heart."

As Decatur was being lifted into a carriage Bainbridge, whom Decatur had once rescued from a Moorish prison, stooped down and kissed his cheek.

With his head upon Rodgers' shoulder and in company with a physician, Decatur was driven slowly back to the city and carried into his residence on Lafayette square, where he died a few hours afterward.

The news of the duel spread like wildfire through the city. The following day John Randolph offered consolatory resolutions in congress, which, however, were promptly objected to, and the press rigorously denounced the practice of dueling.

Barron ultimately recovered from his injury, but it is said the memory of the fatal duel darkened his life ever afterward. He lived until the year 1851 and had charge of several vessels. At his own request he was court martialed upon the charges made against him by Decatur and exonerated.—Exchange.

All Help One Another.

What a wonderful order there is in all human labor! While the husbandman furrows his land and prepares for every one his daily bread the town artisan, far away, weaves the stuff in which he is to be clothed, the miner seeks underground the iron for his plow, the soldier defends him against the invader, the judge takes care that the law protects his fields, the tax comptroller adjusts his private interests with those of the public, the merchant occupies himself in exchanging his products for those of distant countries, the men of science and art add every day a few horses to this ideal team, which draws along the material world as steam impels the gigantic trains of our iron roads.

Thus all unite together, all help one another. The toil of each one benefits himself and all the world. The work has been apportioned among the different members of the whole society by a tacit agreement.

If in this apportionment errors are committed, if certain individuals have not been employed according to their capacities, these defects of detail diminish in the sublime conception of the whole. The poorest man included in this association has his place, his work, his reason for being there. Each is something in the whole.—Emile Souvestre.

THE NIGHT MAGNIFIES.

Something Worth Knowing For Those Who Lie Awake and Worry.

"You have lain awake at night," said a physician, "and have heard a mouse gnawing at the woodwork somewhere down in a kitchen cupboard?"

The listener nodded.

"How loud did it sound to you—as loud as a burglar splintering the door jambs with a jimmy?"

Another nod.

"You have been awakened at 1:30 a. m. by the crying of a teething infant next door?"

A shudder.

"And it sounded like the hoarse murmurs of mingled ululations of a frenzied mob assembled outside to demand somebody's blood?"

Partial collapse.

"Along toward morning you have listened to the thin, small voice of a mosquito circulating above your head?"

An involuntary slap.

"Did it sound like the screech of a planing mill turning out clapboards for a barn?"

Two nods.

"Would you have minded any of those sounds in the daytime?"

A shake of the head.

"Now, I have no doubt you think that the seeming loudness of these sounds was due to the contrasting silence of the night. But take another test. You have been in love?"

Um-um (without utterance).

"And do you remember how much softer and warmer and more thrilling was the touch of your best girl's hand as you strolled with her on the way home from singing school at the witching hour of half past 9 p. m. than it was when you called in the forenoon to ask if you might escort her to the aforesaid vocal exercises?"

An unspoken yum yum.

"Was it the night silence that added the finishing touch?

"It was not," the physician replied to his own question, noting his listener's look of uncertainty. "Take another instance: You think you know how to write—a little."

A smile of gratification.

"Well, you find yourself awake at night and thinking. A gem of an idea suddenly sparkles in the darkness. You surround it with epigrams, and while elaborating the setting you fall asleep. What does this jewel amount to in the morning?"

A sigh.

"There you are. You recall the idea and some of the epigrams and a little of the setting and all of it so commonplace that you wouldn't think of trying to make anything presentable out of it.

"The fact is," the physician went on, "the night magnifies. At night our pleasures are more keen, our pains more distressing, our small successes are triumphs, our little failures are disasters, our faintly cherished hopes appear before us as things realized, our small worries as overwhelming calamities.

"You find yourself awake in the night, and your thoughts wander back to some time in your youth when in the presence of those older and wiser you—as you now see it—were guilty of some slight breach in deportment or of some little offense to good taste in speech, and you dwell upon the condemnation that must have fallen upon you. In the morning if what you were dwelling upon so seriously occurs to your mind at all you smile and say to yourself that if your fault was noticed by anybody at the time it was too trivial for any one but you to remember.

"The night magnifies!" the physician repeated. "Such things as I have mentioned prove it. It is partly due to the silence, but more to ourselves. To account for the latter would keep me talking.

"But take it for granted that whatever your cause for worry at night it will look smaller by daylight and refuse to dwell on it. If your anticipations are pleasant, nurse them, and you will fall asleep. In the morning you will not be downcast because your magnified hopes of the night seem unlikely to be realized."—Washington Post.

BALL FIELD STORIES

Peculiar Incidents Not Covered by the Rules.

PUZZLES FOR THE UMPIRE.

Treadway's Fowl Hit That Struck Fair, but Was Declared Foul—When Tommy Tucker Saw Snakes—A Batted Ball That Never Came Back.

Baseball rules are supposed to cover every possible emergency that may arise during a game, yet a dozen times a week in some nook or corner of the world there arises a situation over which there are certain to be bitter disputes and which the umpire alone may judge.

Even in the big leagues these things occur. One did on the old Eastern park grounds at Brooklyn in a game between Philadelphia and the Perambulators.

The decision of the umpire was upheld by President Nick Young, although it still is open to dispute.

It happened that in the seventh inning, with two men on bases, Treadway hit a line drive down the left field line. The ball beyond doubt was going foul, for it was curving toward the foul line rapidly. Gaffney, who was umpiring the game, was standing at the plate squinting down the line, his eye following the ball.

Suddenly a flight of pigeons swept along. The ball struck one of the pigeons, knocking it to the earth, and the ball itself swerved from its course and struck the ground a foot inside the foul line. The Brooklyn runners raced around the bases, but Gaffney waved them back and declared the hit foul. There was a long wrangle, which resulted in Brooklyn protesting the game, but Uncle Nick upheld Gaffney.

Jiggers Donahue always had a terror of all sorts of snakes, toads and bugs, and this terror once nearly lost Chicago a victory over Washington.

Joe Cantillon knew of this aversion, and when the Senators opened in Chicago Cantillon spent the early afternoon digging fishing worms, grubs and the like, and he arrived at the park with a couple of pans filled with them.

Joe waited several innings, and then, with one of the Senators on first, he began sprinkling worms around the sack. Jiggers did not notice it for a minute, and, indeed, not until the Washington player ran off the bag to draw the throw. The ball came low, and just before he stooped to catch it Jiggers saw the ground covered with worms. He let out a yell and jumped a foot in the air. He managed to block the ball, however, and sent in a hurry-up call for John to sweep the ground around the base.

All through the game Centillon and his men sprinkled worms and bugs around Jiggers and kept him in a state of terror, but with the aid of the broom he managed to frustrate his tormentors and escape without an error, and the following day he appealed to the umpire to make the Senators quit.

Tommy Tucker, however, was not so lucky as Jiggers. He lost a game for Washington to Chicago once and started a battle all because of a trick Bill Dahlen and Bill Everett put up on him.

Tom never did like snakes. Indeed, he held them in abhorrence, and in some way Dahlen discovered this. Washington was to play Chicago that afternoon, and during the morning practice on the west side grounds Dahlen and Everett discovered a small gartersnake and treasured it up.

Along in the fourth inning Everett cracked out a hit, and as soon as he landed on first base Dahlen, ignoring his usual custom, ran out to coach, and a moment later he slipped the harmless little reptile to Everett, who dropped it into Tucker's hip pocket.

Tommy discovered the snake just as the pitcher was delivering the ball, and, with a yelp, he deserted first base. The shortstop gathered up the ball on the run and started to throw to second, but was too late and threw toward first. Tommy was twenty feet off the base, jumping up and down and hunting for something with which to kill that snake, and the ball went to the stands, and Chicago scored four runs in the round.

Tucker protested wildly, but the umpire couldn't find anything about snakes in the rule book and let it go at that.

But possibly the hardest decision an umpire ever tackled fell to the lot of Jack Stratton, who was umpiring a game between the Dallas (O.) team and the club from Sycamore Valley years ago.

The teams were playing down at Lynn's bottom at Sycamore Valley, and the score was 15 to 12, or something like that, in favor of Dallas in the ninth inning, with two out and the bases filled. At any rate, whatever the score was, Sycamore Valley needed three runs to tie and four to win, and it happened that Butch Carpenter, one of the weakest hitters on the team, was at bat.

One strike had been called when Butch hit the ball. Where that ball went no one knows to this day. All the players were running. They saw the ball pitched and saw it hit, but just as the bat hit the ball the boiler at Hick's sawmill, about 200 yards away, exploded.

About five minutes later, when the smoke and steam cleared away, the base runners remembered and ran around to the plate.

The real argument started about half an hour later, when everybody had visited the wreck. Sycamore Valley claimed the victory, declaring that four runs had scored, and Jack Stratton allowed their claim.—Minneapolis Tribune.

Talking About the Baby.

When the visitors asked the mother how old her infant was she replied without hesitation that he was four months.

"Why, no, he isn't," corrected the father, who sat near by; "he is only three and a half months."

"I suppose I shall have to learn it," said the young mother resignedly. "I feel that in a very short while I shall be doing the very thing for which I laughed at mothers in the days before I was married. Then when they told me the ages of their infants in months, weeks and days I thought it was supremely silly. When one would say to me, 'Willie is three months, three weeks and four days old,' I was wont to shrug my shoulders and wonder why she didn't put it in round numbers. 'Four months would be near enough in all conscience,' I would say to myself.

"Also I used to hear that 'Anthony weighs nine pounds and eight ounces,' and that seemed to me a waste of breath; either eight or nine pounds would have been near enough to have satisfied any one's curiosity. But now I am deemed an unnatural mother if I put my child's age or weight in round numbers, and so, being corrected, I will tell you that my precious pet, who is the very sweetest thing that ever happened, is, as his father amends, 'three months, two weeks and—let me see—six days old.'"—Baltimore News.

Advance Thanks.

The phrase "Thanking you in anticipation" is now becoming common. I think it is one of the meanest ever invented and one of the most insulting, for it implies that, however much pains the worker may take, he will get no thanks for it afterward. Why should he? He has been thanked already. It further implies an imperious and insufferable demand which must and shall have immediate attention on pain of being considered no gentleman. Surely no one who really respects a correspondent ought to employ this touting bagman's phrase.—Professor Skeat in London Academy.

LAFCADIO HEARN.

The Way the Writer Got Even With the Heartless Editors.

"Lafcadio Hearn, that wonderful writer, worked on newspapers in his youth," said a publisher, "and the ruthless way his studies were changed, cut and butchered was a great woe to his heart.

"In after years Hearn took a malicious joy in collecting stories about editors—editors and their superior and omniscient way with manuscript.

"One of his stories was of an editor to whom a subscriber said:

"'I enjoyed that poem on the three ages of man in today's paper, Mr. Sheers; I enjoyed it immensely. Do you know, though, I thought that it was originally written the seven ages of man!'

"'So it was, sir; so it was,' said Editor Sheers pompously. 'Yes, the extract was originally written the seven ages of man, but I had to cut it down for lack of space.'

"Another story concerned a weather report. A reporter, discussing the weather, wrote that winter still lingered in the lap of spring.

"The editor as he read over the article called the reporter up to his desk and told him that he would cut out that sentence about winter lingering in spring's lap. He said the idea was good enough and original and all that sort of thing, but it would not do to publish because the high moral tone of the paper had to be maintained in a town full of school girls."

Staring at Royalty.

Royalties are early cured of any shyness of being looked at. They are there to be seen, and both the king and queen when they go to the opera and turn their glasses on the occupants of opposite boxes are openly amused by the disconcerted looks of persons who feel abashed under the inspection. Not a trace of self consciousness is left on the face of an English royalty, with the exception of perhaps a single princess under an artillery of glances. Such attentions are anything but resented. Indeed, the beautiful Duchess of Devonshire used to say that when the butcher boy ceased to turn round after her in the street she would know her reign was over.—London Chronicle.

The party of Uniontown sportsmen who are camping at Palmer decided, for the variety of sport, to take a snipe hunt on Paine's prairie one day last week, consequently, early in the morning they were on the scene. In a few hours the party succeeded in bagging 160 snipe, which is the best record yet made on the prairie.

PHOTOGRAPHY.

Photography today is an economic and social necessity in every community. It maintains the memory and affections of family life through the picture it makes, and which we could not now do without. How often is regret expressed that no picture exists of some friend or relative who is no longer with us! Sometimes, indeed, the camera has to intrude upon the sacredness of the death chamber itself when relatives feel that a photograph in such circumstances is better than none at all. Do not procrastinate. Be wise and "secure the shadow ere the substance fades."

You can get a picture from locket to life-size at Smith's Studio.
